About the Facilities:

Our Convention will take place at Bayou Segnette State Park, located southwest of New Orleans on the south bank of the Mississippi.

7777 Westbank Expy, Westwego, LA 70094

Bayou Segnette is not far from the urban center of New Orleans, yet it features access to two types of wetlands, swamp and marsh. This is a remarkable habitat for plant and wildlife. This habitat is home to American alligators, coypu, nine-banded armadillos, Virginia opossum, raccoons, American mink, red-tailed hawks, kites, red-winged blackbirds and bald eagles.

We'll have our own lodging, kitchen, dining and conference room, oratory and field, with access to fishing, swimming, kayaking, hiking and New Orleans fun!

“St Paul wielded this sword, and with it he conquered men. Ultimately, “sword” is simply an image for the power of truth, which is of a wholly unique nature. Truth can hurt; it can wound—that is its nature as sword. Since life often appears more comfortable lived in the lie or simply without regard to truth than according to the demands of truth, for this reason, men dispute or become bothered by the truth. They want to hold it down, suppress it, remove it from their way. Which of us could deny that truth has not sometimes been disturbing—the truth about oneself, the truth about what we should do and let go of? Which of us can maintain that he has never tried to steal past the truth or tried at least to fashion it so that it becomes less painful? Paul was uncomfortable because he was a man of truth. Whoever commits himself entirely to the truth, has no other weapon but truth, desires no other task than truth, may not necessarily be killed, but he will always approach the vicinity of martyrdom. He will become a sufferer. To proclaim truth without becoming a fanatic or a dogmatist—that would be the great task.” (Pope Emeritus Benedict XVI)
